STOUT'S

SENATOR JAMES H. STOUT

Past

Menomonie was the first city in the United States to provide organized and systematic instruction in Industrial Arts and Home Economics in all grades of the public schools. These facilities were made possible through the keen interest and the great generosity of Senator James H. Stout. From the work begun in the schools of the city in 1890 developed the Stout Training Schools, organized in 1903.

In 1908 came the separation of the Training Schools, then known as The Stout Institute, from the school system of Menomonie. After the death of Senator Stout in 1910, the college was taken over by the state. Today, the college is a monument to James H. Stout; it is the "lengthened shadow of a great man".

Past

In 1903 Lorenzo Dow Harvey came to Menomonie to be superintendent of the schools of the city. In 1908, with the separation of The Stout Institute from the school system of Menomonie, he was appointed President of the college. The early development of the work of the school was due to the efforts of Mr. Stout; the later development and progress were brought about by Mr. Stout and Dr. Harvey working together. The latter was a man of energy, conviction, and zeal. To the building of the college he brought a large capacity for organization and leadership. He was an able administrator; but he was, first of all, a great teacher.

DR. LORENZO DOW HARVEY

To the Class of 1938:

I wonder . . . Has Stout given you a proper background for a successful teaching career? If you have the same teacher philosophy that characterized educators of forty-five, twenty-five, or even five years ago, you are not prepared to do the teaching demanded during the next five years.

"New times demand new measures and new men", quoted from civil war literature, was never truer than it is today. If we of 1938 still feel that we are delegated to teach only literature, science, mathematics, or trades, we are far from the mark. Here in America new problems face us and must be solved, better by teachers than by politicians and office holders.

Recently individual liberties were in danger. Genuine democracy is an issue. There is danger that inherent rights guaranteed by the framers of our constitution are being sold by millions for a "mess of pottage". Individual effort, initiative, and determination are being weakened. The power of government is becoming a menace because individual convictions are being dulled by state and national aids. Thinking is being done for us, not by us. We need to teach and we need to cultivate a deep regard for democracy, to develop qualities of character and methods of action peculiarly necessary in a democracy and to stimulate an active interest in the development of democratic ideals and a love for those liberties possible only in a democratic form of government. No emergency is great enough, no misfortune deep enough to justify the surrender of democratic ideals as America has known them these hundred and fifty years.

Teachers of America have a sacred duty to perform. They may make it possible for the children of America to enjoy the liberties characteristic of America.

When I finish writing this you'll probably think it is a biography or diary
because we have done so many things together I really know all about you - almost. For instance who was the Sunday a long time ago we went to that hunting such way up in the north woods. I have forgotten what the little black-headed number became angry. But I all added interest: I not pleasure to the trip. Also the tragic scene I witnessed when your old "slon" got crushed the life
is inward - out of the little mouse.
Then there were rides we took in the De Soto, and the popcorn we went
and the melted milk
and the showers we went waiting for the National Decoder to release Pat. And the perfume I wish Pierick we didn't get together on I wish we had. And the, lycium we endured and Peg whom we look like hoping we more when next year. I'll see you on will be. I am taking up

SCIENCE CLUB

The members of the Stout Science Club are women of the senior college who are interested in chemistry, biology, nutrition, dietetics, physiology, or bacteriology. During the year each member gives a report upon a subject of scientific interest to which she has devoted intensive study. The group enjoys several social meetings, a picnic, a tea, and a banquet.

The name K.F.S. signifies the threefold objective of this social fraternity: knowledge, friendship, and society.

In 1936, the group established an annual scholarship which is awarded to the Stout man who evidences the best craftsmanship, the highest scholarship, and the most admirable attitude toward the college. MANUAL ARTS PLAYERS

The efforts of the Manual Arts Players realize a threefold purpose: the development of appreciation of the drama, the attainment of skill in the art of impersonation, and the provision of training which may serve as a preparation for future activity in amateur productions.

Men's INTRAMURALS

Accuracy of eye and arm
make a billiard player.

Basketball leads the activities of men's intramurals.

Splash! and an enlivening
swim.

It's pin time again.

Women's INTRAMURALS

A brisk autumn day and field hockey.

A rigid arm and a true
eye aid the archery team.

It is the field goal that counts in basketball.

Strike, and will we be happy!

Look out for those shins,
for the girls really go after the ball.
